

JOURNAL

In this week, I felt more secure of my job as a teacher, because I see that my students were working and learning, it was so great for me to see how they were able to use their knowledge to create something new, however it was a little bit disappointed because some of them did not bring the materials asked for the class.

But it was not bad at all, because the ones who did not bring the materials worked with the others and they made an excellent job. good idea!

In terms of classroom management, I could say that it continues the same, I do not know if it is because of my tone of voice or what, but I feel that I cannot control them and it makes me feel a little bit frustrated... but I will continue doing my best.

do not give up!

MY JOURNAL

During my first week as an english teacher in high school i felt a Little bit desmotivated because of the amount of students per classroom also, because they are a Little bit lazy; another aspect is their behaviour, they make too much noise and in some cases they do not pay attention, this is something that made me be disappointed since, i asked them to be quiet and they did not pay attention to me; i realized something important that they just were quiet and working while the in-service teacher was in the classroom. However, i was in some classes in which the in-service teacher was not, i do not know what happened that day, but they had a good behaviour and they made me realize that i can manage the classroom without teacher's help, i felt very happy that day...

After reflecting about these classes, these days i feel that i can be a better teacher, i feel motivated to do my best in order for those students learn more also, i have learned some new strategies that i am thinking to put into practice.

Do not give up in your intentions to be a good teacher, try to improve your classroom management!
