

Reflection:

During this class i felt very frustrated, because my students were demotivated maybe because the day before was the teacher giving reports about the signatures to their parents and most of them were not good at those scores the teacher gave. So before I start the class I made physical exercises with them like straight arms, sit down, stand up... in order to get them less stress and worried. To introduce the topic I asked them to describe a partner inside the classroom, some were laughing and making jokes about the physical appearance of their partner for example one students make jokes about the size of the ear of a partner, some other commentaries were about the size of their head or the shape of their bodies. Also I asked them if they could change some part of their body which part would be and how they would like to be that part of their bodies. Respect to me I need to work more on how to be more organized with my classes and in some way I start to realize that maybe I could be a good teacher and that this sometime I probably would like to do for my life.
