This week was very excited and entertained because I decided to do an activity for the mother's day, mostly because i wanted to be in touch with the students. (7b students are very problematic and I barely have time to be their friend because I have behave as a teacher) so this activity was perfect to get to know them better.

One of the thing that got to me the most was seeing my problematics student behave correctly, and also the one students that is going through the problems at home, I felt I was like a fresh started for her, she told me her mom was coming to Monteria to visit her and this activity was the perfect gift for her, also she told me that she felt better because all in her life is improving, I can notice that in my classes because the is not having more break downs anymore.

I think that is very important to create this king of activities with the students because I feel like I make them feel comfortable and them stop being the teacher as a supreme and more as a friend, I definitely going to keep doing this.
