

Third LESSON

(April 12th – 2016)

I could not develop my lesson plan as I have expected. The in-service teacher before I start my class, she asked me the favor to work with her and the students in a project of the subject that they need to present the next month and assess their poster presentations about "family members". I work with the students on it and also gave feedback about their previous knowledges that they need for the project. I can say that the lesson was flexible, just taking into account the students necessities. But I need to see that, after the presentations and give their scores , one of the students called Susan , she felt bad because another girl was better than she and cried for it.

When I see that at first, I did not know what to do , but then I think and I said to susan that she is a good students but she need to keep in mind that all of their classmates try to give the best of them too and she need to feel happy for them, because they also are trying to make an effort for learning and show their abilities as she does. After that, she stopped to cry and said me:

"Teacher but it never have happened! I always have the best scores, but its ok, I see they are loving the subject as I love it."

good! you made her reflect!

These words for me were beautiful , I don't know how to describe them but I felt so good with my work, realize that I am making of them good students, make an effort to work and love the subject and also that they are able to realize it and give the best of them to demonstrate their abilities. For me was the best of my lesson in this week.

In general, also I could see during the class that students have fully accepted my role as lead teacher in the classroom. Students came to me with questions, feel more comfortable and more active taking their role as student. So far, this has been a challenge, but a beautiful, an encouraging and educational experience.
