

SECOND LESSON

(April 5th - 2016)

Today, the lesson was great. I could develop my lesson plan without any obstacle or problem. The students were very encouraged to participate and develop all the activities that I prepared for them and were very active during the class and very participates. The most relevant part of this lesson was that I noticed the unfocused students showed a high level of motivation more than the other students did, I could notice that they helped me out to get the rest of the class controlled when their classmates tried to misbehave and this is an important aspect since we as a teachers expect that all students get involve in our lesson. Also, I could observe that students felt more comfortable to participate and I remember that in the first lesson some of them felt shy to do it, with it I could realize that my role as their teacher is good and their learning process is changing in a positive way.

I can reflect that we as teachers have a role of guide with the aim to make that our students build their own knowledgments and learn for lifelong, giving all the opportunities to make them to be sure about their abilities and with it try to make them successful students, show them that they can achieve all their goals as in their learning process as in their life.

good, while you have motivating and challenging classes, Ss will keep motivated and interested!
